The image contains two identical empty diagram templates arranged vertically. Each template is designed for a 'What if... then why?' exercise. It features a central circle connected by lines to two rectangular boxes on either side. The top template has the text 'もし ～ なら' (If... then) above the left box and 'なぜなら' (Because) above the right box. The bottom template is identical but empty.

The form consists of three identical rows. Each row is composed of three main parts connected by lines: a rectangular box on the left, a central oval, and a rectangular box on the right. The left box is intended for a condition starting with 'もし' (if), the central oval is for a connector like '～' (tilde), and the right box is for a result starting with 'なら' (then). The right side of the form has a header 'なぜなら' (because) for the reasoning section.
